My question for the BDCP meeting in Clarksburg on March 26, 2009

With all this concern that you folks here tonite have expressed about reviving all these species that you're so concerned about, how does pumping water out of the Delta improve the habitat?

I submit that survival of these species is a much lower priority than taking our water and sending it down South or the Bay area. In your minds, concern about species is secondary if even that. Your biggest focus is on taking fresh water from the Delta and sending it to cities built in the L.A. area and other coastal communities,

"Please address this directly in for final EIR/EIS."
