

DWR ENVIRONMENTAL JUSTICE FILM SERIES

Wednesday, September 3, 2014

10:00am to 12:00pm

Natural Resources Building Auditorium
1416 Ninth Street, Sacramento, CA 95814

The CA Dept. of Water Resources (DWR) Environmental Justice Series presents two documentaries highlighting the importance of environmental justice and sustainability.

Thirsty for Justice and Living in the Rain Shadow have been chosen for their sensitive and compelling portrayal, highlighting communities in California without access to safe, clean and affordable drinking water. The feature films demonstrate the daily realities many communities face and how they are proactively seeking solutions towards a better tomorrow.

This special screening is in conjunction with DWR's Environmental Stewardship and Environmental Justice principles in promoting a healthy environment and sustainable ecosystems. The screenings will be followed by a filmmaker panel discussion with invited Tribal and Community Representatives.

Thirsty for Justice

The Struggle for the Human Right to Water

Produced By
Environmental Justice Coalition for Water

Event Website Link: <http://dwr.videoss.com/>
(No access code or password is necessary for viewing the DWR Env. Justice Film Series online).

Living in the Rain Shadow

Rural Communities and the Inyo-Mono IRWM Program

Produced By
Bristlecone Media and California Trout Inc.

More Event Information Contact:
Anecita Agustinez at TribalPolicyAdvisor@water.ca.gov or Melissa Sparks at Melissa.Sparks@water.ca.gov

Note: The Living in the Rain Shadow Documentary was funded in part by the Integrated Regional Water Management Program at DWR.