Workshop to explore uses of 'Shared Vision Planning,' a way to link technical and policy concerns

DWR and the California Water and Environmental Modeling Forum, with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers' Institute for Water Resources, are sponsoring a one-day workshop April 22 to introduce Shared Vision Planning to natural resource planners, scientists, and engineers. It will be held from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in Room 500 of the State Library, 914 Capitol Mall, Sacramento. Shared Vision Planning uses planning principles, systems modeling, and collaboration to create a practical forum for making water resources management decisions. DWR seeks public help on Delta emergency plan

DWR is inviting the public to help it devise a Delta emergency response and operation plan. A meeting will be held in Courtland on Thursday, April 10, from 4 to 6 p.m. in the Courtland Auditorium, at 146 Primasing Ave. DWR is working with the Governor's Office of Emergency Services, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, the Delta Protection Commission, and the five Delta county emergency services offices. You can find more information about this workshop on DWR's California Data Exchange Center Web site under "Announcements."

UC Berkeley conference focuses on California, European water management

The Mediterranean climates of California and southern Europe bring us similar water conditions. On Thursday, April 10, scholars and other waterexperts will compare water management in California and Europe at a conference at UC Berkeley. The conference will highlight water management in Europe under the European Parliament's Water Framework Directive and water management in California under existing laws and recent watershed-level initiatives.
